The Next Level
Seriously, Minwoo-Lee was so close to getting rid of Kong. It could have been a slam-dunk if only he was operating by himself. He is all of the client's money!
Ah...

The funds that Minwoo-Lee had invested went to the Simon Corporation from the 23.
Simon Corporation. Isn't that real estate.

Correct! You know it well. Director Kim. That Simon Corporation is a branch of the Korean Estate real estate consulting firm.
We have clients in a joint company by forming a joint venture. The corporation is going to launch the money that clients put as more costs that eventually become hundreds and thousands of dollars.
Note : A joint company can be used to protect a parent corporation or bring in new technology to the body of a merger, and may also be used to obtain a local advantage.

Despite this process, General Minwoo-Lee's job was to transfer the client's invested money, but his failure to intervene in time has created this mess.
But I don't know how a veteran like General Minwoo-Lee has made this big of a mistake.

It wasn't a mistake. Take a look at this.
T...This is!
That's right. Minwoo has declared bankruptcy.
Oh no! Did he fall into bankruptcy?
The recession was triggered by housing market prices, and due to the increase in foreclosed homes bought under loans the capital cashout day has been postponed.
And it eventually led to their bankruptcy...
Is there no solution? No chance?
I can't do much about this either.
But...
Huh?
The person who collected the investment fund, world's 4th or 5th richest man, is the 4th port.
What? Do you mean...
If he releases the funds, we could survive in the comas years.
Spewing of smoke back.
